Supporting community service at MCPL

Caroljean D'Aquila, of Habitat for Humanity of Suffolk, and Kayla Taylor, from the Allstate Foundation, recently spoke to members of Middle Country Public Library's Teen Advisory Council, Green Teens and Mutt Club about community engagement.

The teens learned about Habitat for Humanity's mission, volunteer programs and career paths available and discussed the Teen Advisory Council's upcoming project, in which members will be assembling welcome home baskets for Habitat families as housewarming gifts. These baskets will contain things like housewares and supplies.

The teens also learned about the Allstate Foundation's Good Starts Young Initiative, which sponsors the library's teen skill-building and community service programs.

To help the teens create the Habitat for Humanity baskets, the advisory council was presented with a $250 student grant from Allstate's WE Volunteer Now program.
